IDFPR Releases Annual Consumer Lending Trends Report

Analyzes Select Consumer Loan Products in Illinois From January 2012 Through December 2019

CHICAGO – The Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulation, Division of Financial Institutions announced Wednesday it has released its annual Consumer Lending Trends Report. This report informs the Department of trends in the consumer lending marketplace, including how many loans are made, the type of loans, the amount of the loans, the income of those taking out the loans, and how many of the loans default.

“This data, along with input from consumer advocates and industry representatives, will help us continue to ensure that appropriate regulatory oversight and consumer protections standards are in place,” said Francisco Menchaca, Director of the Division of Financial Institutions.

The types of loans evaluated and explained in the report are payday loans, installment payday loans, title-secured loans, and small consumer loans. One hundred ten companies reported at least one of these types of loans in 2019. The entire Consumer Lending Trends Report may be read here.

Some key findings of the Trends Report include:
